NYC Luxury Residences Showcasing Vibrant Spring Colors

by Haven Team

Monogram New York | Colin Miller

As spring unfolds across New York City, the transformative power of seasonal colors is making its way indoors, particularly in some of the city's most prestigious residential developments. The longer days and warmer weather have inspired a wave of interior design that captures the essence of spring, with carefully curated palettes ranging from wispy pinks to crisp blues. These thoughtfully designed spaces prove that bringing the season's vitality indoors can create an enduring connection to nature while elevating everyday living.

720 West End Avenue

720 West End, an Emery Roth-designed pre-war building on the Upper West Side, has been transformed into a premier residential address, where classic architecture meets contemporary luxury. A model residence, designed by Tobi Wright of InsideWright, captures spring's essence through thoughtful details like the Phillip Jeffries' 'Mirage' mural wallpaper in 'Sands of Time,' creating an ombre effect reminiscent of sunrise and sunset. With 131 residences starting at $1 million, these homes offer a perfect blend of historic charm and modern luxury.
