

Spring has a way of charming New York City – it peeks through budding trees in Central Park, lingers in the scent of sidewalk florals, and, in some of Manhattan’s most stylish addresses, settles right into the decor. Across the borough, a selection of luxury residences is embracing the season’s color palette with interiors that feel fresh, joyful, and as alive as a late-April afternoon. Step inside these stunning homes where spring takes up permanent residence.

720 West End Avenue

Image Credit: Colin Miller

At 720 West End Avenue, a reimagined Emery Roth pre-war masterpiece combines classic charm with contemporary luxury. Designer Tobi Wright of InsideWright outfitted a model residence here to reflect the awakening beauty of spring. The centerpiece is a breathtaking ‘Mirage’ wallpaper by Phillip Jeffries in “Sands of Time,” an ombré design reminiscent of a golden-hour sky. Gold detailing adds subtle shimmer, while textures like boucle upholstery, ivory wool rugs, and natural wood furnishings provide grounding calm. It’s a celebration of the season’s slower pace and organic beauty, all wrapped in timeless design.